

ILL HEALTH PROMPTED MAN TO KILL HIMSELF

Philip Saul, of Beaver Falls, Ends
Life at Daughter's Home.

USED BELT AS NOOSE

Philip Saul, aged 68 years, of Beaver Falls, was found dead Saturday night in his bedroom at the home of a daughter, Mrs. William Pike, in Buffalo Run valley. In a moment of despondency, due to ill health, he had hanged himself with a belt attached to the bedstead in his room. Funeral services were held from Shiloh church at 2:30 o'clock Tuesday afternoon, and burial made in the cemetery nearby.

Mr. Saul was known to comparatively few persons in the Buffalo Run valley. About 6 weeks ago he came from Beaver Falls to the Pike home, where he received every care and attention possible at the hands of his daughter. There are 4 other daughters and also 5 sons, of the latter, one being in the Navy and another residing in Kansas. Appreciating that their father's condition had become quite serious the children assembled last week to plan for his future care and to provide the very best medical attention that might be secured for him. Late Saturday night two of his sons found his lifeless body, a short time after Mr. Saul had retired.

Deceased was born in Germany, and came to this country in 1882, living for a short time at Centre Hall. He was united in marriage to Susan Michael, who preceded him in death 13 years ago. The names of the children who survive him are: Mrs. C. V. Smith, Charles, Lottie, and Robert, all of Beaver Falls; Mrs. L. D. Kyler, of Wadley; George, and Mrs. Lester Corl, of State College, Claude, of Kansas City; Sylvester, of the U. S. S. "Cayman," stationed at San Francisco, and Mrs. William Pike, of nearby Bellefonte.

PROPOSED FOR TRUSTEES

Kiwanis Club Submits Slate for New Hospital Board.

At the meeting of the hospital board on Monday evening the temporary slate, proposed by the Kiwanis, was presented, and the following men were elected to act as the new board, until the new charter is received: Bellefonte and Spring township—John Blanchard, George Hazel, Edward Owens, Col. W. F. Reynolds, W. T. Kelly, Adolph Fauble, W. H. Noll, Jr., and Ralph Mallory. Snow Shoe—David Chambers. State College—J. Laird Holmes, and Prof. Woodruff. Port Matilda—W. Edgar Williams. Millheim—W. F. Shelton. Centre Hall—Frank A. Carson. Howard—T. A. Fletcher. The reason, as has been stated before, for the majority of members being from Bellefonte, is that, if the members from the surrounding towns are not able to be present, a quorum can be formed of local members alone, and any pressing business can be transacted immediately.

A meeting will be held next Monday evening to elect officers, namely, a president, vice-president, secretary and treasurer. Resolutions were passed adopting the new by-laws, and authorization was granted for the application of the new charter, by which the name of the institution will be changed from the "Bellefonte Hospital," to the "Centre County Hospital."

Ford Wrecked by Blowout.

While John Long, the new steward at the Nittany Country Club, was returning from Williamsport early Friday morning, one of the rear tires on his Ford roadster blew out, throwing the car off the road and into a telephone pole, just this side of Hubersburg. Neither of the two occupants was hurt, but the Ford sustained a smashed head-lamp, fender, radiator rod and spring. Betty's service car towed the Ford in for repairs.

Thief Gets Moto-Meters.

Some sneak thief was busy among the cars parked nearby the Armory during the alumni dance last Friday evening. Two moto-meters were taken, one from the Nash touring car owned by Louise Carpeneto, and one from the Ford coupe owned by Gilbert Morgan. Chief of Police Dukeman is in possession of several clues as to the identity of the miscreants whom, it is hoped, will soon be brought to justice.

Bus Line to Rebersburg.

J. Frank Raudabaugh has been granted a permit for a bus line from Loganton to Lock Haven, via Salona. Clifford J. Heid has secured a permit for a bus line connecting Loganton and Rebersburg.

HELPING THE MOTHERS

Centre County Pension Board Outlines Work Being Done.

A meeting of the Centre County Mothers' Pension Fund board was held on Wednesday of last week in Bellefonte. Six members of the board were present, and among other things authorized the following report outlining the work being done:

The conservation of child life, the state has realized, is of great importance. Also, statistics show that it is much more economical to maintain children in their home than it is to support them in children's institutions. Children cared for in their own homes under the care of their own mothers, have a better chance to become healthy, normal children.

The State Legislature, with these facts before them, established the Mothers' Assistance fund. In March, 1923, $1,200,000 was appropriated for this work. The division of this appropriation is made by the class under which the county is listed, the class depending upon the number of inhabitants. Centre County being a sixth class county, her apportionment is small, being only $2,199 per year. To this the county is required to appropriate a like amount—$2,199. This gives the Board of Trustees for their work per year $4,398.

The Mothers' Assistance law states that the Board of Trustees may use 10% of the fund, $439.80, for maintenance or expense for each year. The 10% when not used for maintenance or expense may revert to the fund for the assistance of the mothers and their children. During the existence of the Centre County board, 6 years, its amount for expense has not exceeded $25 per year.

The Board of Trustees receives no remuneration for the administration of this fund. Its duties include the proper administration of the fund, supervision and guardianship of the families, especially as to health and education of the children.

The following is a list of the Centre County Board of Trustees: Mrs. Frank D. Gardner, president, State College; Miss Mary H. Linn, vice president, Bellefonte; Mrs. John S. Walker, secretary and treasurer, Bellefonte; Mrs. W. Fred Reynolds, Bellefonte; Mrs. Chas. E. McGirk, Philipsburg; Mrs. L. W. Nettall, Philipsburg, and Mrs. G. S. Frank, Millheim.

The board at present has under its care 13 mothers and 60 children. The small amount of money granted to each family per year keeps the home together. The board realizes that the wonderful self-sacrifice of the mothers and the assistance of the children are establishing worth while homes, where boys and girls are growing into useful men and women under the care of good mothers and the lesson of industry.

Sunday School Convention.

The 55th annual convention of the Centre County Sunday School Association will be held at Port Matilda on June 25 and 26. All pastors and superintendents are expected to be present. Each school is entitled to one or two elected delegates to represent the school. Such delegates should send credential cards to John Crain, Port Matilda, so he can make arrangements. The registration fee will be $1 to help defray necessary expenses. Miss Emma G. Lemmen and H. C. Cridland, state workers, will be present. Schools should arrange for their delegates at once and get the cards sent as early as possible.

Motorcycle Rider Injured.

On Tuesday evening the motorcycle pit at the Coppins carnival, was the scene of a slight accident which might easily have resulted more seriously. When "Cyclone" Milton was doing his dare-devil stunt of riding a motorcycle around the perpendicular walls of a "motor-drome," the wheels slipped and machine and rider fell to the bottom of the pit. Fortunately Milton fell clear of the pit. He was, however, rendered unconscious. It was found that aside from being badly bruised he was only suffering from shock when examined at the hospital.

Slight Accident at Diamond.

A slight accident occurred on the Diamond on Saturday evening, when a Ford touring car occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Edward Eckenroth crashed into a Chevrolet, driven by Ned Heverly. The Ford sustained the worst of the encounter, having a fender and running board considerably bent. None of the occupants of either car were injured.

Centre County Picnic.

The Centre County Association of Philadelphia will hold its 21st annual picnic on Saturday afternoon, June 21, at Belmont Mansion, in Fairmount Park. All Centre Countians and their friends are cordially invited. It will be a basket picnic.

SUPERVISORS APPEALED FROM 'SQUIRE'S VERDICT

Ferguson Twp. Board Fined for Neglecting Gatesburg Road.

SAY LABOR IS SCARCE

Three road supervisors of Ferguson township, were arraigned before 'Squire Woodring in Bellefonte on Wednesday charged with neglecting to repair the road between Pennsylvania Furnace and Gatesburg, a stretch of about 1 1/2 miles. The supervisors arraigned are Daniel Irvin, Charles H. Meyer, and J. D. Neldig.

C. M. Powley, a taxpayer who lives along the road in question, made the information against them, and was supported by the testimony of a number of witnesses, all of whom own property along this road. Among the statements made by the prosecutor and corroborated by the witnesses, were some to the effect that there were wash outs in the road from 3 to 4 feet deep, and mudholes 200 feet long, so that it was often necessary for travelers to leave the road at many points and drive into the woods, picking the best possible way to get by the impassable spots.

None of the statements were denied by the supervisors, who admitted that the road was in a deplorable state of repairs, but offered as an excuse lack of time and scarcity of labor. They were finally pronounced guilty and sentenced to pay fines of $10, each and also the costs. The defendants immediately applied to the court for an appeal on the case under a writ of certiorari, on the ground that a legal technicality was discovered in the indictment. In the opinion of the lawyers retained by the supervisors, the charge which was brought in the name of the commonwealth, should have been in the name of the township. If before the case comes before the Court, the road is repaired the matter will probably be dropped and everybody will be satisfied.

Witmer Family Reunion.

On last Saturday the Witmer family held their annual reunion at the home of John Witmer, 7 miles west of Pine Grove Mills, with the following persons present, 101 in all: John Witmer and family, Ed Witmer and family, Will Witmer and family, Oliver Witmer and family, Alvin Witmer's family, Calvin Witmer and family, Miss Emma Witmer, Win Witmer and family, Joe Westbrook and family, Claude Corl, Sisle Reish and family, Harry Bilger and wife, William Grove and family, Roy Zimmerman and family, Oscar Witmer and family, Claude Witmer and family, Clarence Corl and family, James Symmonds and family, Tom Tressler and family, Charles Witmer and wife, Mrs. Allen Witmer, Clayton Corman and family, Charles Walters and family, Olie Johnson and family, Daniel Eberhart and son George, Mrs. Williams, of Massillon, O.; John Dreibleb and family, James Kuestenbender and wife, Mrs. Gordon Harper, D. G. Reid and family, Newton Dreibleb and family, and Henry McWilliams and C. C. Shuey, who gave a little talk on the pleasure and importance of family reunions. Tables were arranged in the barn floor nearly 100 feet long, loaded down with all the good things of life, as far as eatables are concerned, which always occurs when the Witmers get together. It was very evident from expressions on all sides that everyone enjoyed the occasion to the fullest, and they decided to meet together again next year.

Now You Know It's "Centre."

The spelling "C-e-n-t-r-e" is correct as applied to this county, the State Geographical Board at Harrisburg has decided. Maps have not been unanimous in this matter of spelling—some sticking to "Center"—and the board took official action to determine the proper way to spell the county's name. The board also directed that Queen's Run, in Clinton County, is correct. The contention was raised by residents that it should be Quinn's Run. The spelling of Gulick Twp. in Clearfield County, was sustained in preference to Guelick Twp.

Had Hand Mangled.

Ira Winters, 32 years old, residing at Ashland, nearby Osceola Mills, had one of his hands badly mangled by an exploding dynamite cap last Saturday. He was carrying a miner's dynamite cap in a coat pocket, while he was engaged in doing some farm work, and thrust his hand into the pocket containing the cap, which for some unknown reason exploded. Two fingers were virtually blown off and the hand otherwise terribly mangled.

LAND SALES REALIZED OVER $5000 IN TAXES

Bi-ennial Auction of Seated and Unseated Tracts is Held.

BIDDING WAS LISTLESS

At the treasurer's sale of unseated lands on Monday at the Court House, 160 tracts of land were sold for delinquent taxes. The total amount of the sale was approximately $5,182. About 54 of these tracts were bought by the county, no other purchasers bidding on them, at a cost of more than $1500. These lands will be held for two years, and in the event of no one reclaiming them, will be resold by the county. Twenty-eight persons, appeared and paid taxes on as many tracts, to the amount of $480.20, which tracts were immediately scratched from the list. The bulk of the land sold lies in the soft coal region between Snow Shoe and Philipsburg and a greater part of the purchasers bought the tracts as a speculation. Very few of the tracts brought more than the amount of the taxes and costs, and no fast bidding was heard from the crowd which attended the sale.

On the same day, Bellefonte traveled to State College and walloped that aggregation by a score of 8-2. On Saturday Bellefonte playing at Centre Hall defeated the latter 7-3, and State College won from Millheim on the latter's grounds 12-8.

The standing of the four clubs comprising the league is now as follows:

To Have Gun Drill.

Captain Herbert S. Miller has issued orders to the members of Troop B, to the effect that there will be a three days practice camp beginning June 19, to be held in Curtin's Gap, for the purpose of having every man in the organization qualify on the machine gun and pistol before the regular annual encampment at Mt. Gettys, the last two weeks in July. The start will be made early Friday morning for the camp ground, which is one of the most beautiful spots in Centre County, some of the men to be transported in trucks and others will go mounted on troop horses. It will be a glorious outing and should be attended by every man who can be there.

Ship Bears to Centre County.

Black bears have become so numerous and so destructive in McKean county, that the State Game authorities have authorized the trapping of about 30 by the game wardens in that locality, to be released in other state forests. Six of these animals are scheduled to be placed in Centre County mountains. Game Warden Mosier has already received two of the number. The first, a female, weighing about 150 pounds, arrived safely and was released in Green valley, on May 26. The second, a male, came last Saturday and was much larger than the first, weighing about 300 pounds. It was let go at the same place. Warden Mosier stated that he expects the other four to arrive within a week.

Mother and Baby in Accident.

Mrs. Darby and her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Johnson and child, all of Flemington, occupying a Ford car driven by Mrs. Darby, attempted to make the turn at the approach to the south end of the bridge at Mill Hall, and struck the side of the bridge. The impact was with such force as to throw Mrs. Johnson and her child from the car, the woman falling on the baby, which it was thought at first was seriously injured, but aside from bleeding at the nose and a few bruises later appeared to be all right. Mrs. Johnson and the other occupants of the auto escaped with a few bruises.

McKinley's Sister Dies.

KIWANIS NOTES

Dr. Locke Censures Newspapers
for Not Supporting Baseball.

The regular Kiwanis weekly noon meeting was held at the Brockerhoff House, Tuesday, June 10. Good speaking, discussions of civic interest and the usual good fellowship prevailed. Chaplain J. K. Kranke, of the New Western Penitentiary, gave a very instructive and interesting talk on the reformation of prisoners, contending that the present honor system was the best to fit them for society, upon completion of sentence.

Dr. Melvin J. Locke spoke briefly in the interest of the Bellefonte baseball, which he said is not getting proper local support. He criticized the local newspapers in this connection. There are sufficient citizens in the community who are lovers of the national game, but a great many of them do not realize that it is their ball club and should have financial help as well as attendance at the games. In other words, get back of the club and boost it. After all, it is a poor town that cannot boast of a real ball club. President Ard appointed as a committee, Kiwanians Rossman, Deltrick and Noll, to give any assistance possible to help this situation.

Arrangements have been made to broadcast by radio the opening of the Kiwanis International Annual Convention at Denver, Colo., Monday evening, June 16, at 9:45 Eastern Standard time. In this section of the country the program will be relayed by KDKA, Pittsburgh, and WJW, Schenectady. All Kiwanis Clubs throughout the country, with their 88,000 members, will meet at their respective headquarters to listen in. The Bellefonte interclub committee is arranging a smoker at the Brockerhoff House that evening for their members and guests. Static is not included in the arrangements.

The following guests were present: R. H. Smith, Ridgway; Carroll Cole, Philipsburg; J. K. Shaw, Harrisburg; Arthur Barracough, I. W. Spear, M. H. Yearick, Dr. Locke and Harry A. Smith, Bellefonte.

COOLIDGE NOMINATION SPELLS PARTY VICTORY

President's Leadership Wins Admiration at Cleveland.

PARTY IN NEW HANDS

Calvin Coolidge will be nominated with an overwhelming majority at the Republican national convention, which is in session at Cleveland this week. The nomination of the candidate for Vice President is a matter that at the present writing appears to be very much unsettled. Former Senator William E. Kenyon, of Ohio, also former Senator Albert Beveridge, of the same State, are prominently spoken of for the honor. A half dozen others are also under consideration. Former Governor Frank C. Lowden, of Ohio, could be nominated, virtually without opposition, if he could be prevailed upon to accept. He has flatly declined, on the ground that he believes he can render greater service to the party in the great agricultural sections by remaining off the ticket.

The convention formally opened on Tuesday, the keynote address delivered by Congressman Theodore Burton, of Ohio. His presentation to the convention for that purpose, at the suggestion of President Coolidge, marked the emerging of the Republican party from old to new management and the beginning of plans that emphasize a new order of things. This is due to the firm control assumed by President Coolidge of every important phase of the convention's work. The President demonstrated his determination to take the lead in shaping the convention program when he made it known that the nominee for Vice President should not be an oil-tainted United States Senator. He thereby eliminated the personnel of the ticket from any ground for attack or criticism because of the scandals revealed by senatorial investigations. The President's next decisive step was to force into the background Republican senators who had denied him support in matters of legislation. Equally decisive was the President's demand that the principle of upholding law enforcement should be proclaimed. By so signally assuming leadership in shaping the party's course on these three issues, the President effectually blocked the plans of the reactionaries and forced the drafting of a platform in keeping with the spirit of the times. The President's admirable courage in doing these things at such a crucial period in the party's history has won for him many thousands of new friends and greatly added to his strength which his supporters believe will prove irresistible at the polls next November.

REPUBLICANS MEET

Chairman Mayes Resigns and W. I. Fleming Opens Campaign.

At a largely attended meeting of the Centre County Republican Committee, held Wednesday evening at Heck Park, Chairman Frank Mayes resigned and Wilson I. Fleming, of Bellefonte, was elected to the unexpired term, which is about six months. In accepting, Mr. Fleming made a stirring address in which he outlined several plans for further solidifying the party ranks in the county and thereby insure a decisive Republican victory next November.

Chairman Fleming was authorized to appoint an executive committee of five, representing all parts of the county, which will not only aid him in directing the campaign, but also serve as a finance committee. At his request the committee empowered each precinct chairman to appoint a precinct executive committee of three for active work. Another suggestion advanced by Chairman Fleming, and which was enthusiastically ratified by the committee, proposes closer co-operation with the Republican women's committee.

There were interesting informal talks by a dozen or more persons, including J. Laird Holmes, nominee for the Legislature; Hon. H. B. Scott, M. Ward Fleming and Josiah Pritchard, of Philipsburg.

Fire at Morristown.

Fire destroyed two double frame houses, in a row of six, at Morristown on Wednesday evening. The houses belonged to the American Lumber & Stone Co. and were occupied by families of workmen.

The Colonel's Wonderful Invention

By CLARA DELAFIELD
(© 1924, Western Newspaper Union.)

"MR. JOHNSON!"

Johnson, the cub reporter of the Planet, got up quickly and hurried to the city editor's desk, where he stood watching the great man glance up and down the list of his assignments.

He had been a reporter just three weeks, and was bursting with a sense of his importance. He was resolved to make good at any price.

"Mr. Johnson, Colonel Wingate—you know who Colonel Wingate is?"

"The millionaire candy manufacturer?"

"That's the man. Well, you're aware that he runs a big advertising contract with us, so he's one of our friends. Well, he's just finished building a big new house on the hill, and he wants us to send a man to write a description of it for the Planet."

"Anything particular to be described?"

"Yes, the colonel has introduced every possible electrical device into it. He's got some extraordinary things to show, I understand. He's got dumb waiters that rise up through the floor, and all that sort of thing. Give him a good write-up. And play up to Mrs. Wingate—she's an important social leader in the community, you know."

"Very good, sir."

Johnson put on his hat and hurried away, rejoicing in his assignment. At space rates this should be worth ten dollars to him, and ten dollars is a goodish sum when you are a cub reporter. He walked up the hill to the colonel's house.

Now this is the story that was never told exactly as it happened. All went well for a long time. Colonel Wingate proved to be a hale and hearty old fellow of a jovial nature. He gave Johnson a drink and a cigar, and began to show him over the new house from cellar to—rooms upstairs.

"Now here," he said, leading Johnson into a large room filled with small tables apparently set into wire frames—on the pressure of a button beside the bed in any of the rooms the bed drops and the table goes up, carrying the breakfast which has been ordered the night before.

"Wonderful!" said Johnson.

The colonel took him into the living room. He showed him the button which brought the whisky and cigar stand sliding to the side of his chair. He showed him the button that controlled the new writing desk. Each section of the library slid on grooves to the chair's side at the pressure of individual buttons.

"Wonderful!" said Johnson.

"I've got more wonderful things upstairs, my boy," said the colonel, clapping Johnson on the shoulder. He led the way to the foot of the stairs and pressed a button.

Instantly, with a gentle, sliding sound, a chair came down the banisters and hung, suspended invitingly, in front of them. It contained two seats.

"Get in," said Colonel Wingate.

Johnson got in, and with an easy and uniform motion the chair conveyed them up the stairs. A pressure of another button, a gentle tilt, and they were deposited at the door of the colonel's bedroom. The colonel looked at Johnson.

"Wonderful!" said Johnson.

The colonel clapped him on the back. "I've got more wonderful contraptions than that, my boy," he said. "Great stunt, electricity isn't? Now see this!"

He opened a cabinet in the wall and showed him a number of buttons.

"This one," he said, "completely controls the bathroom. If I wake up feeling tired, and think I'd like a nice hot bath—or a cold one—at my bedside, all I have to do is to reach up and press this button, and the bath slides out of the bathroom to the side of my bed."

"Wonderful!" said Johnson.

"Then when I've bathed, this button controls the towels, etc., and this one sends the bath back again, and it empties itself automatically."

"Could I see it in operation?" inquired Johnson.

"I guess so," answered the colonel, opening the door. He reached up and pressed a button.

Instantly, "with the velocity of light," as Johnson explained afterward, the bathtub shot into the colonel's bedroom and came to a rest beside the bed.

Simultaneously a piercing shriek rang through the air.

"B-beg p-pardon, my dear," stammered the colonel, groping for the button.

"W-wonderful!" said Johnson.

OVER THE COUNTY

Very few farmers in Centre County can remember back to the time when crops were planted in June, an experience had by every farmer in Centre County this spring.

A year-old Tom cat, owned by Mr. and Mrs. Shannon Booser, of Centre Hall, has adopted a brood of baby chicks and mothers them in fine style. If he continues to be a good "mother" Mr. Booser says he will "set" him and let him hatch a brood of his own.

Catherine, little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Bender, of Centre Hall, was painfully burned about the face and neck, when a coffee pot overturned, while the family were visiting friends near Millburg. The scalds are fortunately not deep enough to permanently mar the child's face.

A fawn deer, but a few hours old, was discovered in a field on the William Jordan farm, near Colyer, on Tuesday morning of last week. The mother deer was nowhere in sight and Mr. Jordan is caring for the little animal until it becomes old enough to take care of itself, when it will be released.

An airmail plane was lost in the fog for some time last week, coming from Cleveland to Bellefonte. The aviator circled over Centre Hall for a little while until he got his bearings, when he made a "bee line" for the Bellefonte field.

Centre Hall High School baseball team closed the season last week by defeating State College High, on the Grange Park diamond, by a score of 10 to 4. The Penn's Valley boys had a remarkable season, losing but one game on their schedule.

Graver C. Rhodes, owner of the Woodland Poultry Farm, reports a chick with 7 well developed legs, from a recent hatch of 6,000. The chick is a white leghorn with the normal pair of legs, except that on these two feet are turned to the rear, and five other legs sprout out from various directions to the rear of these. Some of the legs are turned upwards, others drag on the ground, some have the feet to the rear and some to the front, but all are apparently normal and do not interfere with the bird's locomotion.

Monthly Report For Cow Testing Association.

The Centre County No. 1. Cow Testing Association, according to Willard Straw, tester, reports 24 herds tested, making a total of 250 cows in milk and 42 dry. One cow was found unprofitable and the owner disposed of her, feeling she was a losing proposition.

17 cows produced over 40 lbs fat and 6 over 60 lbs fat. 13 cows produced over 1,000 pounds milk and 15 produced over 1200 pounds milk. The following is a list of the 10 highest producing cows for butter-fat for the month of May.

BETTER CARE OF WOOL

Centre County Farmers Profit by Co-operative Marketing.

Sheep shearing is under way in Centre county. The experiences of the past few years in co operative marketing of the wool has led most of the sheep men to exercise great care in the handling of their clip. They find that it frequently means a difference of ten cents a pound in the price received.

The sheep must be dry, according to the best growers, when they are clipped. The fleece should be tied with the fleece side out, rolling in the wool from the belly, neck and breech. This leaves the body or better grading wool exposed. Most of the wools are being tied with paper twine. This is a hard finished twine and does not leave strands in the wool. Strands from sisal twine frequently adhere to the wools and come in the woven fabric. Wools tied with sisal twine are graded as rejections and bring ten cents less a pound.

To keep the wool clean and prevent shrinkage, many farmers in the county pack their wool into sacks or a big box. The Farm Bureau office has received a supply of this twine to be used by the wool growers of the county.

State Agricultural Notes

During April, 211 lawbreakers were prosecuted by the State Bureau of Foods and Chemistry for violations of the pure food laws. This is an increase of 177 cases over the corresponding month of last year.

Anthraxosis is one of the most serious diseases of the raspberry. It can be eradicated only through preventative measures. They are fully described in Circular No. 64, available from the Bureau of Plant Industry, Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture, Harrisburg, Pa.

Chicks will be poisoned if they eat rose bugs. Watch your peeps and see that they are fed often and regularly—then they won't be hungry for rose bugs.

The white-marked tussock moth is a voracious feeder on leaves of shade and fruit trees. Spraying with arsenate of lead, one and one-half pounds to 50 gallons of water, will destroy the insect and save the foliage.

Hay stocks on Pennsylvania farms May 1, of this year, amounted to 247,600 tons, as against 688,000 tons last year on the same date.

Total receipts of the Pennsylvania Bureau of Foods and Chemistry, so far this year, amount to more than $393,000. The sum includes all license fees and fines collected from sellers of adulterated and impure foods and drinks.

APPLE SCAB WARNING

Fruit Growers Advised to Make Another Spraying Soon.

Infection of apple scab has been found in 32 counties in Pennsylvania, according to a report just issued at the County Agents office Prof. M. L. Nixon, plant disease specialist, at the Pennsylvania State College. Recent inspections of orchards indicate that scab is prevalent in all parts of the state.

The first infection was found in Cumberland County on May 15, and a tremendous amount of damage to the quantity and quality of the fruit crop is predicted unless control measures are successful.

Nixon warns growers to plan on making another spray if they note evidence of scab in their orchards and if the weather continues wet. He advises only using lime sulphur, summer strength, for this application. If wet weather continues, the plant disease specialist looks for a secondary infection of scab which is likely to be more serious and dangerous than the first.

Pennsylvania Railroad Issues an Attractive Seashore Folder.

With a view to familiarizing the public with the attractive features and the development of the many Seashore pleasure resorts located along the New Jersey Coast, the Passenger Department of the Pennsylvania Railroad has just issued a prettily illustrated 192-page folder, describing in detail the varied facilities and advantages of all vacation Seashore resorts from Long Branch to Cape May.

The folder is a highly artistic specimen of printing and is illustrated with a number of large half-tones, made from original photographs. The text has been carefully written with fidelity to detail and the folder will prove an illuminating presentation of the attractions of the New Jersey Coast and its facilities for a weekend trip or a pleasurable vacation.

Those who have enjoyed a summer outing at Atlantic City, Asbury Park, Ocean City, Wildwood, Cape May or any of the other New Jersey Seashore resorts, and those who read this folder, will doubtless appreciate the fact that no vacation is wholly complete without a dip in the briny deep.

A free copy of this attractive folder may be had upon request of D. N. Bell, Passenger Traffic Manager, Pennsylvania Railroad, Broad Street Station, Philadelphia, Pa.

State Farming Notes.

Pennsylvania is the third nursery state in the Nation. It is surpassed only by New York and California. There are 200 commercial nurseries on the State's inspection list, and they cover about 4,000 acres.

About 55,000 individual specimens of Pennsylvania insect life are in the collection of the Bureau of Plant Industry. Many of them were found during nursery inspections.

Tests of weed killers, to determine whether they measure up to the claims of the manufacturers, will be made by the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture.

Farm work in Pennsylvania is from 10 days to 2 weeks late in the southern counties, 3 weeks late in the middle belt, and a month behind the schedule in the north tier counties.

According to the last census, Pennsylvania has more than 6,500,000 bearing apple trees. This is a decrease of about 3,000,000 trees below the figures quoted in 1910.

In 1920 Pennsylvania had 3,632 pure bred horses, 81,290 pure bred cattle, 15,781 pure bred sheep, and 34,775 pure bred swine on the farms.

Potato and Apple Crop.

Pennsylvania apple growers last year shipped 3,500 cars of fruit from the leading production centers. This figure surpassed the carload shipments of 1920, a heavy crop year, by more than 500 cars. Franklin County, leading 1,361 cars, led the 31 counties contributing to the State's apple shipments. Adams County ranked second. Shipments of potatoes amounted to 3,599 cars, a decrease of 1,524 cars below 1922. Nearly half the shipment, comprised potatoes of the previous year's crop, which had been stored. They were placed on the market during the first six months of the year. The remainder of the 1923 crop was shipped after Aug. 1. Lehigh County held first place, leading 1,095 cars. Potter County was second with 434 cars.

Rush Convention Photos.

The Bellefonte aviation field has been unusually busy this week, taking care of incoming and outgoing planes. In addition to the regular airmail ships, between New York and Cleveland, the Republican national convention being held in the latter city has necessitated the use of quite a number of extra planes. Photographs taken at the convention are being rushed daily to New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore and Boston newspapers. This rapid service enables metropolitan newspapers to publish photographs a few hours after the films leave Cleveland.

Three Wrecks in Day.

Wednesday was a Jonah day for Pennsylvania Railroad Co. men in this section. A bad freight wreck tied up traffic for some hours on the new line at Howard. A locomotive got off the track at Snow Shoe. Early in the evening a car in the middle of a heavy freight train jumped the track at Julian, delaying the passenger train from Tyrone to Lock Haven exactly three hours.

Motorist Injured.

Waldon Moore and two others, from Lewistown, were driving a Dodge roadster toward Bellefonte Wednesday evening, when they failed to make the turn at the new penitentiary, the car rolling across the railroad track and pinning Moore underneath it. Although the car had to be lifted before he could be released, it was found that he had not suffered any serious injury.

New York Governor Wants Democratic Convention to Act.

A revision of the Volstead act to allow states so disposed to legalize the sale of light wines and beers is urged by Governor Alfred E. Smith, of New York, in the first public statement on the subject issued since he became a candidate for the Democratic nomination for president.

He said he favored having Congress fix a maximum of alcoholic content "based upon science and sound reasoning," allowing each state to establish for itself whatever alcoholic content it chose so long as it did not overstep the limit set in the national law.

The amount of light wines and beer to be sold in states that chose to legalize the traffic, as well as the manner and media of their sale, should be left to the states themselves, said the Governor. Whatever alcoholic strength is made legal in future, the saloon has gone for good, the Governor believes.

He urged strengthening of the federal laws with regard to interstate commerce and the importation of strong liquors. He said that most of the liquor consumed in New York is smuggled from foreign shores.

13 PRISONERS IN JAIL

Several New Boarders Located Recently With Sheriff Taylor.

Several new inmates have been committed to the county jail in the past week making a total of 13 prisoners "on the hill." Joseph Knott, an Italian laborer employed by the Chemical Lime Company, went on a rampage on Tuesday evening and became so violent that persons in the neighborhood of his home, in Buffalo Run valley, became alarmed and sent for Sheriff Taylor, who placed him under arrest, and brought him to Bellefonte.

Leslie Wanda, of State College, proprietor of a livery stable at that place, was arrested and lodged in jail, on Monday evening on a charge of "possession of and selling moonshine whiskey" illegally. He was apprehended by Officer Mingie, of State College, who turned him over to Sheriff Taylor.

John McGuire, of Morrisdale, who has been boarding at the home of Mrs. George Rhoads, confessed on Sunday to the theft of a diamond ring, which belonged to Mrs. Rhoads, and which was valued at about $100. He was arrested and lodged in jail by Chief of Police Dukeman, pending a hearing.

Ira Gill, who was convicted on May 26, at a hearing before Squire Keichline, of defrauding Mrs. Martha Johnston, of State College, of a board bill amounting to about $79, was committed to jail until the next term of court, upon his failure to produce $500 bail.

Samoan Women Happy and Not Overworked

The life of a Samoan woman is pleasant. She is neither overworked nor savagely treated, says Edward A. Sallabury, in Adventure Magazine. From her earliest childhood she is trained in the intricacies of the siva-siva, and all her life the dance is a source of pleasure to her.

Samoan women will always dance for you if you ask them, and they show by their smiles and songs how much they delight in granting the request. In their girlhood they deck themselves with flowers and garlands of leaves and are fond of coquetry, but unlike their Polynesian sisters of the Marquesas and Society Islands, they are chaste.

Before the coming of the Americans with new medical theories, the life of an infant was doubtful, and even now the old customs are carried out in some villages, it is said. The new-born child was laid on its back and three flat stones were laid around the head. To make the baby beautiful the family thought it was necessary to flatten the forehead and nose. Nothing is uglier, they feel, than our hideous, pointed "canoe noses." The baby was fed with filtered coconut juice for three days, while a "wise woman" tested the mother's milk. Often the child died.

Spices in Demand in Early Days of History

The tantalizing flavor and piquant qualities of spices have made them sought after from the earliest days of mankind, and an adjunct to civilization at all periods.

In the early days of history spices were worth fabulous sums, owing to the difficulty of obtaining them and the high cost of transportation.

When Alaric the Goth conquered Rome in 410 A. D., says the New York World, he asked as a ransom 3,000 pounds of pepper, then worth more than its weight in gold.

The first organization of dealers, it is said, was the "fraternity of pepperers," and it was in the Fourteenth century that the name was changed to the "guild of grocers," which depicted on its coat of arms six cloves.

Venice at its height traded in spices to the amount of $10,000,000 annually, and it vied with Portugal in securing cargoes from far eastern ports. Columbus was bound for the spices of the East when he chanced upon a new continent, and Vasco da Gama, the famous sea fighter, made one of his most important voyages to secure a cargo of pepper, cinnamon and ginger from India.

Light and Dark Stars

Two hundred millions of millions of miles away is a star called Algol. It is the second brightest star in the constellation of Perseus and it has the curious habit of varying in brightness at regular intervals.

After much research we know now that Algol consists of two stars—one bright, the other dark, says London Tit-Bits. They are each about a million miles in diameter and about two million miles apart. They revolve around one another and when the dark star is between us and the bright one the light we receive from the latter diminishes.

There are several other stars of the Algol type, and it is simply through our researches that we are aware that there exist in the heavens dark stars—stars which give no light at all and are in themselves totally invisible.

How many there may be we do not know, for it is only by their eclipsing bright stars that we can recognize them at all.

Get Loans From "Aunt"

In Paris and other big French cities the pawnbroker is called "my aunt." In France one needn't blush in doing business with the pawnbroker, for he is the state; that is, the government conducts the pawnbroking business. It does it very well, too, if I am to believe the testimony of some Americans who have "traded" with "My Aunt" while awaiting delayed remittances from home. "My Aunt" has had a good year's business. She does little business nowadays with the working-man, for he is always in work. The center of poverty has moved. It is the white-collar brigade which, unable to make both ends meet, resorts to "My Aunt." Oddly enough, "My Aunt's" shop in Paris is on "the Hill of Piety." Not a misprint for pity.—A. B. L., in World Traveler Magazine.

Franklin's Thrift

We hear a great deal of Benjamin Franklin as the great exponent of thrift, remarks the Kansas City Star. Historians recall, however, that the great scientist-statesman was not always thrifty enough. In his refusal to patent his famous stove, he was wasteful of his own and the public's profit. He wished his idea to be given free to the world, and so did not protect his invention; an Englishman made some changes for the worse in the Franklin fireplace, secured a patent on it, and reaped a fortune from the sales.

Fear Alligator's Tail

In several of the southern states alligator farms are maintained for the purpose of using the hides for shoes and other leather articles. It is said that the keepers of these creatures are more in fear of their tails than their teeth. When attacking an enemy an alligator will try to strike first with its powerful tail before using its cruel teeth.

Chess Tournament No Place for "Rooters"

Chess is one game, or sport, where the rooter is conspicuous by his absence. The stickler for golf etiquette, who frowns if a robin chirps while some one is attempting to putt, would be considered a noisy nuisance at a chess tournament. A gallery of silent spectators may stand at a respectful distance from two masters of the game, but those of the gallery must keep quiet. If an important move is made—one that appears to have peculiar significance in regard to the outcome of the contest—there must be no cheering. Even nodding approval is barred if the nod will cause the collar to rattle.

Chess masters regard their pieces by the hour. Minutes will pass while all of the possibilities and eventualities are considered from every angle. There must be absolute quiet, for chess is a game for thinkers, and thinkers cannot be disturbed without serious consequences to their train of thought. The escaping of a sigh seems as loud as the exhaust of a locomotive. The dropping of a pin would be regarded as an outright violation of the code of ethics. Chess is a game where concentration rises to sublime heights and where silence is obligatory if not golden. Municipal authorities who have established quiet zones and then been at a loss to know how to maintain quiet in them might learn something from a chess tournament. Place a group of chess players in each zone.—Washington Star.

Get Beautiful Effects From Lighted Marble

When an official of the United States bureau of standards was making an inspection of indoor lighting arrangements as used in Europe he was surprised to find an old church in Italy in which the daylight was filtered through thin slabs of delicate tinted marble. The effect was a surprisingly beautiful one and one not easily duplicated by our makers of ornamental glassware, as there is a peculiar charm about the natural coloring of some of the Italian marbles, writes the Washington Star.

However, the marble must be so thin for such a purpose that it could not form a commercial substitute for window panes or for use in electric light fixtures. Now a French investigator has found that such marble slabs can be used in much greater thickness if they are polished on both sides and then saturated with paraffin or shellac. By giving them such a treatment he has been able to obtain beautiful effects in illuminating corridors by the light of tungsten lamps concealed behind the marble walls of the hallways. The loss of light is said to be only about 20 per cent (or no more than with most of the milky glassware used in fixtures), and as the whole plate of marble glows the effect is surprisingly charming and unusual.

Cause of Petrification

This process is called petrification. When wood or the carcass of an animal apparently turns to stone we say it petrifies. The word "petrify" itself means turning to or making into stone. It is from the Latin "petra," a rock or stone, and "facio," to make or to do. But the fact is, organic matter does not actually turn into stone. This is what really occurs: Water containing dissolved minerals, such as calcium carbonate and silica, infiltrates through the organic matter. Particle by particle, as time passes by, the calcium carbonate or silica takes the place of the organic matter. After many years, perhaps hundreds or thousands, it seems that the wood or animal has turned to stone, for often the original form and structure are retained in the process. The organic matter really only acts as a mold while the stone is being formed from the minerals in the infiltrating water.

Desert Showers Count

The effect of a single shower on the southern margin of the Chilean desert is noted by Charles Darwin: "The farmers, who plant corn near the sea coast, where the atmosphere is more humid, taking advantage of this shower, would break up the ground; after a second they would put the seed in; and if a third shower should fall, they would reap a good harvest in the spring. It was interesting to watch the effect of this trifling amount of moisture. Twelve hours afterward the ground appeared as dry as ever; yet, after an interval of ten days all the hills were faintly tinged with green patches; the grass being sparingly scattered in halflike fibers a full inch in length. Before this shower every part of the surface was bare as on a high road."—From Desert Trails of Atacama, by Isalah Bowman.

Egyptian Water Clocks

Casts of two ancient Egyptian water clocks have just been presented by the Egyptian government to the Science museum, South Kensington, London, England. One of the clocks comes from Karnak, and dates from the reign of Amenhotep II, 1400 years before Christ. The other is from Edfu, in the Ptolemaic epoch. From an examination of these clocks and the scale of measurements recorded on each, it appears that the "hour" of that remote period was a variable length, being one-twelfth of the length of the day or night of the particular time of the year. A study of these ancient timepieces is regarded as important in the comparison of astronomical observations.

The modern woman approached the medical man tremblingly.

"Is there no hope of my husband?"

"Go on madam; . . ."

"Is there no hope, doctor; is there no hope?"

"That depends, madam, on what you are hoping for," said the doctor, reaching for his hat.

A

And He Had Told All About His Wife

By CLARA DELAFIELD
(© 1924, Western Newspaper Union.)

THE girl in the train that brought Edgeworth out from the city to his suburban home was charming. She was evidently from some distant town, for the mark of the suburbs was visibly lacking, and she seemed curiously at a loss. When Edgeworth had placed her suitcase in front of one of the seats and sat down beside her she confided to him that she was visiting her sister at Norbury.

"Norbury? Why, I live there!" exclaimed Edgeworth, delighted.

It was not that he cherished any serious hopes, but life was very gray at Norbury. He and Mary had lived there for six years and they were hopelessly antagonistic toward each other. They had settled into the comfortable apathy of middle age.

"It must be nice to live so near the city," said the girl.

"Well, that depends how you look on it," answered Edgeworth. "If you have a good home and congenial family life—"

"I'm sure you have," said the girl. Edgeworth threw a sort of eloquence into his silence. The girl looked at him inquiringly. And then he never knew how it came about, but of a sudden Edgeworth found himself pouring all the troubles of his home life into the ears of this stranger.

"But surely your wife understands?" she asked.

"Well, it's a matter of temperamental disagreement," answered Edgeworth. "We were never really suited to each other, that's the trouble, and when one makes a mistake like that, one has either to stand the gaff or cut the knot. I never had strength enough to cut the knot. You see, there's the child."

"A little girl?"

"A little boy. And of course I have my duty to him. There have been times," Edgeworth confided, "when life hasn't seemed possible. But I just go on and make the best of it."

"I suppose that's what we all have to do," replied the girl gently.

After a long pause Edgeworth said: "I hope we shall meet again."

"I hope so," she responded.

"My name is Edgeworth, and I live at 113 Maple avenue. I'm quite frank about it, you see. I've enjoyed our meeting so much. Perhaps we can arrange an introduction."

"I'm sure it can be arranged," she answered.

She seemed thoughtful. Edgeworth had expected her to tell him her name but she showed no inclination to do that, and while he was pondering over whether he should ask her the train entered North Norbury station.

"North Norbury!" exclaimed the girl. "I get off here."

"You must let me—"

"But do you—?"

"No, I get off at South Norbury. But let me help you."

"Oh, no, no!" answered the girl, and, seizing her suitcase she almost ran from the compartment.

Edgeworth decided that he had frightened her a little by his precipitancy. Still he had her promise that they would meet again. He had to be content with that, but he mused about the girl with the brown eyes and soft voice during the brief run to the next station.

Upon the platform, to his astonishment, he saw his wife waiting. His heart suddenly warmed toward her. It was seldom indeed that she came to meet him on his return from the city.

"This is very nice of you, coming to meet me, my dear," said Edgeworth as he kissed her.

"Meet you?" A little laugh broke from her lips. "My dear John, I haven't quite reached that stage of imbecility yet."

"Then may I inquire why you are on the platform?" demanded Edgeworth in a chilling voice.

"You may. You remember my cousin Estelle whom I've often spoken about? Well, I had a letter from her this morning, saying that she was on her way to pay us a long visit. She was to have arrived on this train. I guess she must have got off at North Norbury by mistake. You didn't see a pretty girl with brown eyes, did you? Dear Estelle, how I'm looking forward to our meeting! We've always been such friends. She tells me everything."

Exercise for Health?

If persons thought as much about protecting their health as they do their money there would be much less sickness in the world. A certain amount of exercise is necessary to keep the body healthy but it should not be overdone. Walking, swimming, dancing, etc., are good forms of exercise, of course, but so also are chopping wood, turning the ice-cream freezer, working the garden and the many other tasks that may normally enter one's life. The individual himself must be the judge as to whether he gets enough exercise day by day. Moderation should be the rule.

Mistaken Policy

"Why does Three-Finger Sam go around saying Grimson Gulch is the wettest village on earth?"

"Because he thinks he's smart," answered Cactus Joe. "He thinks it's booming the town to get people coming in from all sections of the country and then leave them disappointed."

—Washington Star.

PROMOTED OR FIRED?

A young man, having found the wallet of a business executive, was ushered into his private office.

Said the latter: "Well, young man, say what you have to say and say it quickly. My time is worth a dollar a minute."

"And so is mine. Here is a wallet you lost yesterday, less pay for an hour's time which I used in waiting to see you," the young man replied as he extracted $50 from the wallet.—Stevens Tech. Stone Mill.

OR HAVE HER SPIT IT OUT?

Wife—My, that poor girl ought to be operated on for such an impediment in her speech.
Hubby—It would only be necessary to extract her gun.

Enlightened

"I have a window in my soul!"
Announced the poet great;
His brother said: "Your words give me a pane I can't locate!"

Poems Were Lacking

The Bore—Do you know, Tennyson's poems carry me completely away?

Miss Pert—Really? I'm awfully sorry we haven't a volume in the house.

Interesting Tag of War

Old Sailor—Yes, mum, that's a man-o'-war.

Lady—How interesting! And what is that little one just in front?

Sailor—Oh, that's just a tug.

Lady—Oh, yes, of course, tug of war. I've heard of them.

Would Save One Meal

"I fear Helen is going to marry a very mean man."

"Why do you think so?"

"She suggested a morning wedding, but he wanted to make it after lunch, on the ground that she would get one more meal at home."

DEPENDS ON THE FORM

Betty—Is it had form to appear in knickers?
Bess—That depends on the form.

Surcease

I dreamt I dwelt in marble halls.
It was a great sensation
To gayly snore and dream no more
The housing situation.

Trying a Technicality

Doctor—You have been living too high. You have violated nature's laws and must pay the penalty.

Patient—Oh, come, now, doc! Get out an injunction or something, can't you?

Reason Made Plain

"Lend you the silver? Why don't you borrow of Markley? He's easy."

"But I don't know him as well as I know you."

"That's just it; he don't know you as well as I do."

Punishment to Fit Crime

Mother—What is little Freddie bawling about?

Father—He nearly swallowed my cufflinks, so I gave him a couple of cuffs.

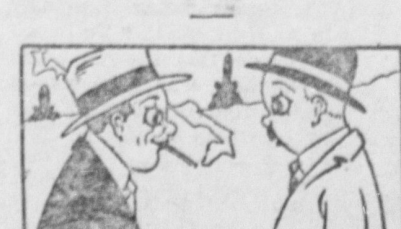

Big Party

"Sister must be giving a swell party. She has ordered some lemon extract."

"Ah, a bottle for a cake?"

"No, she ordered a case."

MORE PRECIOUS STILL

"My, this good weather is worth its weight in gold!"

"More'n that—worth its weight in coal!"

The Difference

Americans like action, fast.
From every game's beginning—
But Englishmen like tea and cakes
At every other inning.

Poor Outlook

"Papa, did Jack ask for my hand?"

"Yes, and I guess that's about all of you he could support. I found out that his salary would just about pay your manicure and glove bills."

Invisible Tow-Line

In automobile racing there is an invisible tow-line. This so-called tow exists only on the board tracks in speeds of better than 90 miles an hour. It is the suction of the machine in front caused as it travels through space and can be likened very much to an inverted funnel. If the car back of it can keep within the space which would be equivalent to the spout of the funnel it is taken along at the same rate of speed as the car which is creating this vacuum. This method of riding is used quite often by the slower cars. Its disadvantage is that the motor picking up such a tow has no means of cooling and the motor is inclined to overheat very quickly.

Missing Persons Reappear

The kidnapping of Charley Ross many years ago constituted for a time a "celebrated case." The disappearance of Dorothy Arnold formed another. But it seems, according to a report of the National Association of Travelers' Aid Societies, that hundreds of similar cases occur every year. No fewer than 900 women and girls utterly disappeared in the United States last year. What tragedy swallowed them up, whether they are living or dead, is not known to officials, family or friends. Of the many thousands of men, women and children who annually disappear, however, it is gratifying to find that about 92 per cent are finally found alive.

Proved His Honesty Just the Same

By CHARLES E. BAXTER
(© 1924, Western Newspaper Union.)

It WAS one of those thick fogs that seldom, even in the heart of winter, descend upon the city. Belton was twenty-one, jobless and starving. He had been two days without food. He had grown desperate after his long fruitless search for employment. A country boy, used to milking cows and tending horses, and doing chores about the farm, untrained—what chance had he in a city of specialists?

Desperate thoughts had come into his head, and now, in the thick of the fog, he was wandering in the shopping district when suddenly he saw the face of the girl.

A girl in silks and satins, beautiful beyond imagination, carrying herself like a queen. Belton's heart was uplifted. He drew in a deep breath even as she vanished. Somehow there was inspiration in the mere sight of her.

When he saw the purse lying on the sidewalk at his feet. He snatched it up and ran. The act had been so sudden that no one noticed it. In a moment he was lost in the fog.

When Belton got to a safe place he opened it. It contained a single twenty-dollar bill and a piece of paper, on which was written, "Elizabeth Dering," with an address following.

All that day Belton wrestled with temptation. At last he broke the bill and had a good meal. He went to bed.

Next morning he received a letter asking him to call in response to an advertisement. That afternoon saw him established in a comfortable position. And now his conscience leaped into a fury of activity.

He had robbed the girl in the fog, and he knew he would have no peace until he had returned the money to her and confessed. On his first payday he set off for the address given, a twenty-dollar note in the purse.

He was surprised to find that he was not going in the direction of the fashionable quarter. In fact, after a while he found himself in a distinctly undesirable, almost impossible region for such a girl as Elizabeth Dering to live in. Negroes swarmed everywhere. Belton came to the conclusion that Miss Dering must be engaged in settlement work. But there was no settlement anywhere in sight, and finally Belton's chase ended at the door of a negro's ramshackle frame house.

By this time his spirits had sunk far below the zero mark, and only the strength of his original impulse carried him on. He rang the bell and presently a stout, slatternly negro woman appeared.

"Does Miss Elizabeth Dering live here?" Belton inquired.

"Shore she do, Mister, and if you'll just step into the parlor I'll call her," replied the woman.

Belton stepped into the parlor, redolent of plush and shiny with golden oak. The setting was sordid beyond compare. In a few minutes he heard the sound of skirts. Then a rather comely young negress came into the room. At the sight of Belton a smirk came over her black countenance.

"I—I think it must be a mistake," Belton faltered. "I wanted to speak to Miss Elizabeth Dering."

"Sho' I'm Miss Elizabeth Dering," answered the girl.

Then Belton realized what he had refused all along to admit as a possibility. It was this negress, and not the beautiful girl he had glimpsed, who had dropped the purse.

He drew it out and showed the bill. He was a little surprised that the negress did not pounce upon it. But he explained.

"I was a thief," he told her, "but I was hungry."

"Sho', that's all right," replied the girl, with a broad smile. "I guess most of us would have done the same if it was hungry, and it's mighty honest of you to have brought it back."

She smiled more broadly as Belton took his departure. He went out in a dream. The vision of the girl would never become a reality for him.

When he was gone Elizabeth Dering ran into her mother in great excitement. She told her the story.

"Miss Burroughs shore must have had our address in her purse," she said, "and that's why she ain't done arrange for the laundry since we moved, because she lost it. Gee, twenty dollars! I guess she won't miss that. Ain't we the lucky ones!"

Basis of Achievement

Are you doing the biggest thing possible to you? Are you radiating all the vitality you possibly can? Are you doing everything in your power to keep yourself up to 100 per cent efficiency? If not, you should find out where the trouble is, what it is. Perhaps you are not taking the proper care of your health, not eating the foods which generate the maximum of physical and mental energy; or are eating too much or too little. If you lack energy, if you do not feel life pulsating through every atom of your being all day long, if you tire out very easily, if you have to goad yourself to do your best, if you resort to stimulants, to drugs, or tea—then there is something the matter. Find it; correct it. Vitality is the basis of achievement.—Marden.

The Bee's Limit

In gathering honey bees travel within a radius of two and a half miles from their hive.

Gorilla Not Ferocious Animal Long Pictured

Apparently the gorilla has been a much maligned beast. The old stories of his ferocity must have been all wrong, for now we are told on what seems to be indubitable authority, that these biggest of apes are most sensitive creatures, and that the difficulty hitherto experienced in keeping them alive when captives was due to failure to treat them with the delicate consideration, without which they soon die of broken hearts.

What they really want is to be loved. Without that they fall into a lethargy of despair that passes for stupidity, but when the recipients of tender and delicate attentions they reveal the intelligence to be expected of man's nearest relations.

As Dr. Hornaday countenances these new characteristics of the gorilla nature, they cannot be ascribed to the ingenuity of overzealous press agents, as they are tempted to suspect who rather enjoyed—when at a safe distance—hearing about gun barrels broken over hairy arms, the threatening clash of monstrous teeth in preparation for attacks on lions and the beating of resonant breasts in the working of murderous rage.

But perhaps gorillas have changed and deteriorated since Du Chailu's day. That bold traveler and field writer did not see them as pretty pets for ladies or as sufferers from any angioneuroses.—New York Times.

Rhinoceros Can Scent Enemy Two Miles Off

Many animals give off scent through their feet. The bloodhound can "scent" his object many hours after it has passed.

Scent depends a great deal on atmospheric condition; on a sharp, dry day it does not "lay." On a muggy, still day, however, even human beings will scent a fox, as their odor sticks to surrounding objects, such as bushes and hedges.

Elephants have a wonderful sense of smell, either from breath or body, but the keenest-scented animal is undoubtedly the rhinoceros. One big game hunter has stated that in favorable conditions this animal can "wind" a man for two miles. This may be considered a tall order, but in Africa the atmosphere is wonderfully clear.

What is the explanation of dogs and cats finding their way back to their original homes after being taken many miles away? The explanation is believed to be "other." Scent is conveyed to animals "on the wind" by this means.—Exchange.

April Fool

Many attempts have been made to account for "All Fool's day" or "April Fool day." The most satisfactory explanation seems to be as follows: Before the English changed their calendar in 1532 the legal year began March 25 instead of January 1. Most all of the feast days and festivals were originally celebrated eight days.

April 1 was the octave or eighth day after New Year's day, March 25. It was therefore the day on which the New Year festivals reached the highest point and ended. The Roman festival known as the "Feast of Fools" on February 17 may have influenced April Fool, because on that day the Romans also played tricks and practical jokes. The Hindus have a spring festival on March 31. Some have tried to connect "All Fool's day" with the mock trial of Christ, but the connection is probably only imaginary.

Playtime Important

It is only for the sake of the free life that material competence and knowledge of fact are worth attaining. Facts for a living creature are only instruments; his play-life is his true life. On his working days, when he is attentive to matter, he is only his own servant, preparing the feast. He becomes his own master in his holidays and in his sportive passions. Among these must be counted literature and philosophy, and so much of love, religion and patriotism as is not an effort to survive materially. In such enthusiasms there is much asseveration; but what they attest is really not the character of the external facts concerned, but only the spiritual uses to which the spirit turns them.—G. Santayana in Yale Review.

Sheep in America

Sheep were unknown in the domesticated state in America until after the Spanish conquest. The beginning of the sheep industry in the New World dates back to the time of Cortez and his conquest of Mexico in the early part of the Sixteenth century. Nearly all Mexican sheep can be traced to early Castile breeds. This is also the source of the early sheep in the western part of the United States. It is believed that the English colonists first brought sheep to Virginia in 1606, originally all sheep probably came from Asia, but American breeds all sprang from stock imported from Europe.

When Forks Were New

The present-day fork, with its four prongs, was not developed until after 1725, and as late as the period of George III the wife of a gentleman in waiting to the king, about 1788, wrote that silver forks were used only by the nobility and foreign ambassadors, and that, since they had but three prongs, the knives were made broad-ended, so that one might use them to eat peas and catch fruit juices. It seems that the use of the dessert spoon was unknown at that time.

One Way to Dispose of a Lover

By MYRA CURTIS LANE
(© 1924, Western Newspaper Union.)

SHOULD she put him to the supreme test? Dolly was wondering as she sat side by side with her fiancé, listening to his words of love, his arm about her.

Somehow she had never felt quite sure of Harry. She cared for him—but he didn't quite measure up to her standard of a man. A little small, perhaps, in many ways. And she was his own age—thirty, and infinitely older in experience.

After all, unless he could attain to that standard of magnanimity that she had set up, she didn't want him. That was what she was thinking as she listened to his confession.

"I feel I've got to tell you, darling, that my life hasn't been quite all it ought to be."

"You mean that there have been women in your life before?"

Yes, that was what he was trying to tell her.

"In more than a—right way?"

"Yes. Just as with all men. Not merely sweethearts, but—everything. You understand?"

"Who were they? How many of them?" asked Dolly, with a beating heart. And, as he was silent, "Two? More than two? Three? Half a dozen?"

Harry was silent. She felt his throat move convulsively as he swallowed.

"A great many more than that," he answered.

"Dozens?"

"Yes, more like that."

"You must have been quite a lady-killer in your time, Harry," she said acidly.

"Dolly, that's what no good woman understands. There have been women—some one practically all the time since I was a boy. Every man is like that. If women only married good men, there would be mighty few marriages. Dear, I've told you this because I want us to start our life together in complete understanding. I'm coming to you and asking you to forgive. Do you think you can?"

"Why, Harry," she answered, "I'm sorry to hear what you tell me, but I've heard something of this sort before. I—I'm not ignorant of life, you know," she added, with a little laugh. "Yes, of course, I forgive you, Harry. Only—there's something I shall have to tell you," she added with a nervous little laugh.

"You mean you've been in love before—been kissed?" he asked.

"Oh, yes, I've been kissed, Harry," she answered, with a little mouth of disgust that he did not see in the darkness.

"Engaged?"

"Why—yes, I was engaged once, when I was a young girl," she replied. "Now, what I've got to tell is something worse than that."

Suddenly he swung toward her. "My God, Dolly, you—you don't mean you—?" he stammered.

"Once," she answered gravely. "Harry, I must tell you about it. I was a child—only sixteen. I had not learned the difference between good and evil. He was a man. It was on a vacation. I—I didn't know, understand—?" She broke off. "Now I've told you all, Harry. Can you forgive me?"

But he was rocking to and fro. "My God, my God!" he was moaning.

She laid her hand on his arm.

"Harry, I—I thought after what you told me yourself you would be big enough to understand."

"My God! It's different! It's all different! Don't you understand that it's different?"

Silence fell. At last he rose. He was slinking away. She stopped him with a word.

"We may as well understand each other, Harry," she said bitterly. "I suppose you mean that you wish to end our engagement?"

"What else is there to do? You know—"

"I suppose I'm a fool to have told you."

"You had no right to make me love you with this hideous secret in your past life."

"Oh, go away, Harry, you make me tired!" she answered contemptuously, and watched him disappear in the night.

So that was that. Small men, small standards. She was glad she had told him and was free again. Fortunately her reputation was not at his mercy; she was only visiting at the hotel.

But what made her gladdest of all was that she would never have to let him know that her confession, which had been made to test him, was a lie.

Counterfeit Money

There is no rule by which counterfeit money can be detected. Counterfeiters try to make their bogus money as much like real money as possible. Some counterfeit bills are such exact imitations that only experts can distinguish them from real bills. Sometimes counterfeit money is detected by the difference in the quality of paper used; again it may be recognized as counterfeit by secret signs and numbers which have not been observed by the counterfeiters. There are so many different kinds of paper money issued by the government that it is almost necessary for the individual to depend on bankers and other experts to detect bogus bills which may be in circulation.

STOMACH WORMS IN SHEEP ARE MENACE

Of the internal parasites common to sheep the stomach worm is a real menace to the farm sheep industry. While the parasite is found in sheep of all ages, lambs are principally affected. The older sheep, although showing no symptoms of the parasite, are usually responsible for the spread of the disease.

The worm is thread-like, usually somewhat coiled, about an inch in length and from a reddish to dirty white in color. The parasite may be found in the fourth stomach of infected animals at any time of year. The pest is transferred to healthy animals through pastures. The eggs, which are excreted from infected animals in the feces, hatch in from twelve to twenty-four hours. In ten to fourteen days the parasites reach the embryo stage, crawl to a blade of grass where they are eaten by the sheep.

There are no visible diagnostic symptoms by which one can distinguish the disease from other internal parasitic diseases. A post-mortem examination of a sick or recently dead animal will show the presence or absence of the parasites. If present, the worms will be found near or imbedded in the walls of the fourth stomach. In general, the symptoms of internal parasites of any kind are a dullness or lack of thrift in the animal followed by diarrhea.

Eradication requires a combination of rotation of pastures and medical treatment. Infected pastures may be made safe by keeping sheep and cattle off from them for a year. Burning over the pasture or cropping it one season is also satisfactory. Often, infected flocks that can be moved every two or three weeks to non-infected pastures show marked improvement.

There are three different medical treatments that may be used satisfactorily, namely: the coal-tar creosote, the nicotine sulphate, and the blue vitriol or copper sulphate treatment. In case any of the treatments are to be used, the flock should be fasted from twelve to twenty-four hours before treating and for four hours afterwards.

Clean House Essential for Success With Pigs

A clean hog house is the first requisite in connection with raising a healthy crop of pigs, says the Nebraska Agricultural college. Merely scraping, shoveling and sweeping the dirt out of a shed does not make that shed safe for new-born pigs. Round-worm eggs and filth-borne disease germs which are the sources of our most destructive pig troubles are microscopic in size and thousands of them may be contained in the dirt and filth which can only be removed by washing. The only way to destroy worm eggs is to boil them. A good disinfectant will destroy the germs which cause bull-nose, mange, pig typhoid, etc. To make the hog house safe, scrub it with boiling lye water. The lye will cut the dirt. Then spray all posts and walls with a solution of liquid cresols (30 to 1) and put in fresh clean bedding.

Dehorning Makes Stock Farming More Pleasant

Feeders shipped to market often sustain losses from fighting in crowded cars when not dehorned. In short, dehorning is one of the little jobs that makes farming more pleasant and profitable and one that should be done when there is least danger of the wounds becoming infected. Flies tend to irritate the exposed cuts and sometimes cause trouble. Extremely cold weather is also unfavorable. Consequently, the humane and economical method is to treat the buttons when they are first found on the head of the young calf.

Live Stock Notes

To make the hog house safe, scrub it with boiling lye water. The lye will cut the dirt.

Horses like alfalfa stems. Refuse from the cattle racks is very acceptable to horses.

Hogs can be fed economically and do well even without pasture, but they need a great variety of food.

Sheep follow their leader and diseases follow sheep, if the master does not follow proper prevention practices.

Hog raisers find the market hard to please; a fact which makes hog raising an unsafe business for indifferent men.

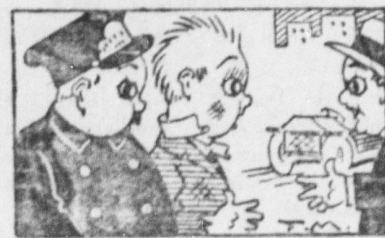

Good management of the sheep flock requires careful advance planning. Prepare now for the lambing season. Look to your sheds and equipment.

In most cases the cause of under-sized and stunted colts is the lack of proper rations, which is a condition that should not exist where feed-stuffs can be grown abundantly.

Both of Same Mind
